VIII. ROUNDTABLE REMARKS

A. Orejel states this is our final meeting for the school year, as well as, thanking everyone for being on top of their work. Especially towards our advisors for making it easier for us to understand how elections work.

A. Bilapatte states he would like to thank the advisors for being extremely helpful, since at times it was very hectic. I know during my interview; I spoke to James on how I would like to learn how the election committee works and it was a great learning experience for me. Towards my committee members, I thank you for working as a team.

K. Lefin states he is grateful for the opportunity. This semester went by really fast and I am thankful we got through everything as a committee. I am proud of all of us and I would like to come back.

E. Pinlac states that you all put a lot of work in the committee. In the past not all of the committee members worked together, and I think that all of you did a great job working together. I have been defending your process and mindset every time I go into the board of directors meeting. I cannot say enough compliments about the committee, and I would like to thank our advisors for supporting the group. It helps having people from different areas and their expertise to help advise our students during difficult moments.

J. Carrol

While you may not have all the historical context, you all jumped into the opportunity to work together, despite with all the curveballs. I am impressed with how focused you are with staying on task and leading with good intentions. I cannot say this with every group I have worked with, but you have truly jumped in. This might seem small to you due to it being your role, however, there way and upheld integrity, valued every students concern, and did not rush into judgement. I hope you find that this speaks extremely well about your character. Some people might think it is a simple student government election, however, this speaks how larger elections are held. I have been working with the advisor team for many year

You have been a great resource to the committee, and I cannot wait to see your growth working with students in the future.

A. Orejel states thank you James for your words of wisdom and guidance. As well as, supporting us when we had questions in order for us to come into our own conclusion.

S. Saquee states she would like to thank Antonio for being a wonderful chair member. Your calm personality during difficult times was much appreciated.

A. Orejel states it seems easier to be in a meeting with multiple people now, since before it made me nervous. This is something you will gain if anyone becomes chair someday.

M. Hinrichs states if you can return, I do hope we can manage some of the work beforehand.
