

FALL 2011

By Moises Kaufman & Tectonic Theater

Directed by A. Fajilan

In 1998 the Tectonic Theatre traveled from New York to learn about the savage beating of a gay, University of Wyoming student, Matthew Shepard. In an effort to understand and bring healing to the overwhelmed community, they interviewed residents, law officers, officials, religious leaders, university members, students, friends, families, pro & anti-gay activists, and the national media. A fascinating compilation of voices deeply affected by the brutal beating and death, the show provides a stark testimony to our nation's moral conscience.

Her company MeND premiered "Dive" at The Garage. "Dive" explores the extremes that push and pull and tear at the fabric of our lives. It asks how does this affect our mental health, especially with minds and bodies that have felt the impact of colonialism. It furthermore poses the question of how do we heal.
